Sponsorship Description and Benefits

One of conservation's most well-known couples is the Muries. Scientists and authors, Olaus and Mardy Murie spent most of their careers in Alaska, championing protection for one of America's last frontiers. Mardy is fondly called the "Grandmother of the Conservation Movement" for her work to help pass the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act that set aside 104 million acres of land in Alaska and doubled the size of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.
